LATE SUMMER 2014 / GWENWOOD WALL

THE URBAN ELECTRIC CO.

Master bedroom Letting a large watercolor painting by artist Kim McCarty set the airy tone, the designers chose simple sheers to let in the seaside light. A custom wraparound headboard envelops both the bed and the bedside table from Jonathan Adler. The hanging bedside lamps by Urban Electric are custom-accented with teal ribbon at the base. The bedskirt fabric is "Summer Palace" from Schumacher.

great casual vibe and makes you want to hang out for awhile," Hranowsky says. "Their Siam salad is so good, I've even attempted making it at home!" (698 King St.; leonsoystershop.com)

Butcher & Bee

Fuel up on Saturday with brunch at Butcher & Bee. The menu is ever-changing according to seasonal availability and is posted on Facebook, but comfort foods such as French toast are mainstays on Saturdays and Sundays. (654 King St.; butcherandbee.com)

Perla Anne

New York has Central Park; Charleston has Marion Square Park. Every Saturday, this park is alive with vendors such as artist Stacey Bradley of Perla Anne, who sells her hand-printed linoleum and wood cut art. "Bradley is the most beautiful soul. You want to scoop up her things and take them home to feel inspired," Hranowsky says.

Proud Mary

While you can't physically visit a retail space for Proud Mary textiles, it isn't hard to find designer Harper Poe's goods—or her influence. Poe, who founded her company to help support textile artisans around the globe, collaborates with them to create handmade goods that reflect her modern aesthetic. To see Poe's pieces in Charleston, look for them at Worthwhile and Mac & Murphy, or visit her website. (proudmary.org)
